OH, YES! THE SPECULATORS GOT HOLD OF THE TICKETS FOR WORLD SERIES, BUT HOW?

James E. Gaffney, Owner of the Bostons, Tells of Trick Played on Him.

PRICES GET A BOOST.

Giants' Secretary Makes Denial, but There's the Proof That Sale Is On.

Just to show that reserved seat tickets for the world's series are in the hands of speculators and are being sold at exorbitant prices, James E. Gaffney of New York, owner and President of the Boston National League Club, sent out to-day and bought from a ticket speculator sixteen tickets for the series for which he paid $50 apiece. Each ticket is good for three games of the series in New York and the regular price of such a ticket is $9.

Mr. Gaffney was impelled to this action by the fact that his request for forty-seven sets of tickets, good for three games in New York, was turned down. With his request to the New York Baseball Club Mr. Gaffney inclosed $428, the total price at $9 a ticket. He wanted the tickets for the members of the Boston National League team and some friends.

"They told me," said Mr. Gaffney, "that there was such a demand from baseball people I couldn't get what I wanted. That statement amazed me. Gaffney knows the ropes."

"I told Harry Hempstead, President of the New York club, that I had lived in New York too long not to know the ways of ticket speculators. I assured him there were no speculators. He said a scattered few tickets might have reached speculators, but indignantly denied that there was any general traffic in reserved seats."

"I have just spent $500 to show I know what I was talking about. The tickets I have were all bought at the agency in the Cadillac Hotel by men who just walked in and bought and paid for them. Now, if they want to check up who is selling their tickets I'll give them the numbers of season tickets that were bought for me. They are 15 and 17 for the first game, and 13 and 14 for the second game, and 15 and 18 the third game. If they have the name of the man or men who bought these tickets at $5 each they might ask him what he got for them from the speculators."

"I am going to furnish these numbers and all the other numbers to the National Commission and am going to do it personally and in a loud, emphatic tone of voice. I am going to ask Garry Herrmann and President Lynch and Ben Johnson how it comes that the owner of a major league club is turned down when he asks for 47 seats at $9 each and then sends out and buys 16 seats at $50 apiece, the same as if he was buying peanuts. I could buy all I wanted, but I think my expenditure of $500 is enough to prove my point."

TWO DOLLAR SEATS ALSO WITH SPECULATORS.

The Evening World was informed this afternoon by several persons who are thoroughly reliable that quantities of the $2 reserved seat tickets, which are supposed to be resting in the New York Baseball Club strong boxes, guarded like gold or precious stones, were on sale in the Wall Street and Tenderloin districts. Speculators, The Evening World informants said, were getting $6 a piece for these $2 tickets.

In the limited time at hand The Evening World was unable to get hold of any of these tickets. But if it is true that the New York Baseball Club has allowed even one of them to get into a speculator's hands the act constitutes a crime against a patient public. For these are the tickets that are to be sold to the waiters in the line to-morrow morning, and the pledge of the New York Club is that they be sold without re-

COOMBS TO GET REPORT OF SERIES BY TELEPHONE

Athletics' Pitcher in Hospital and Will Have Phone at His Bedside.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—While his teammates of the Athletics are flouting for the championship, Jack Coombs, "Iron man" and their idol, will be lying in a hospital with fourteen pounds of lead on each foot and an eight-pound weight on his head, dragging his vertebrae apart. By his bedside will sit the pitcher's wife, telephone in hand, and she will detail to him the great battles, play by play.

"Go to see at least one or two of the games," Coombs urged his wife. "Your being here can't help to drain typhoid poison out of my system."

"I can't do it, Jack," was her reply. "The team wouldn't look like the Athletics to me unless you were there."

Friends of Mack's great pitcher, who told of his condition to-day, said his release had punctured one of the Athletics' most cherished plans. When the dark horse of the championship fight, but just as all arrangements were completed to have him secretly round into form again the release came and the plan was off.

BRIDE-ELECT KILLS SELF WHEN FICKLE LOVER DISAPPEARS

DIES WITH WHITE ROSE.

Floral Symbol of Purity Rests on Body of Maiden Who Loved in Vain.

The thoughtless sibs of small boys who entertained themselves poking fun at the girl over the unhappy ending of a brief girlish romance was the direct cause of the suicide of eighteen-year-old Clara Courter, who shot herself dead in her father's home, in Belleville, N. J., last evening. This was revealed by investigation to-day that developed the additional fact that little less directly the jilting of the young girl played an important part in her determination to end her life.

Little Miss Courter's home is at No. 17 Brighton avenue, Belleville, which is in the 80th section of the town, and throughout that part of Belleville she enjoyed great popularity. She was employed at the Westinghouse electrical factory in Amers. About two weeks ago there came into her life a man somewhat older than the girl. How or where she met the lover whose short courtship was to end so tragically is not clear. His name, according to the girl's family, was Robert Edwards and it was understood that he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad and that he lived in Philadelphia.

GIRL'S PARENTS CONSENT AND WEDDING IS PLANNED.

Shortly after meeting Edwards Miss Courter took him to her home and introduced him to her family. A few days later the girl told her father that she was going to marry Edwards. Her parents were surprised, but her earnestness in pleading for their consent to the marriage finally caused them to give the couple their blessing, and a week ago last Sunday Edwards was to visit the Courter home and arrange for the wedding. He failed to appear, and from that day until she finally killed herself, so far as can be learned, the girl heard nothing from him.

Miss Courter was concerned over her lover's continued failure to come to her, but a naturally cheerful disposition made it appear that her heartache was beginning to wear away. She never complained, but it is now believed that she had quietly investigated and had found that her sweetheart was not as he had represented himself.

Meantime the story of the jilting came out. It reached the small boys of the neighborhood, and yesterday while the girl and a friend, a Miss Fitzgerald, were watching a ball game, a group of youngsters amused themselves by standing near the girl and humming "Waiting at the Church." Spectators at the game said to-day that they noticed the girl start when she heard the plaguing words of the ancient rhyme, but she smiled bravely, and before she left the game the incident had ended. Miss Courter walked toward her home early last evening her mother and a friend, Mrs. James Eaton of No. 32 Academy street, who had been calling, joined her and all three entered the house together. While supper was being prepared the girl remarked that she did not feel hungry and thought she would lie down. She went to her room, and nothing was heard from her for an hour, when Mrs. Eaton entered to call her. She found her lying on the bed, fully dressed, with a gaping wound in her temple and a .32-caliber revolver clutched in her hand.

GAZES ON BRIDAL ROSE AS SHE KILLS HERSELF.

It was seen that although fatally wounded the girl was still alive, and a physician was summoned. She survived but a few minutes, however, and failed to regain consciousness. A search of the room did not reveal any note explaining the suicide, but nearby, on the corner of the bed, was a white rose, which evidently was the last object upon which the girl's eyes rested. SULZBERGERS GET LIMIT OF LAW FOR SELLING BAD MEAT

Must Pay $500 Fine in Each of Three Cases—Sentence Suspended on Fourth.

COMPANY SHIFTS BLAME.

Tainted Meats Came From Chicago Stamped O. K., Lawyer Says.

Sulzberger & Sons' Company, a corporation, conducting an abattoir at the foot of East Forty-seventh street, and also handling Chicago slaughtered meats, was fined $500 in Special Sessions to-day on conviction of having in its possession meat unfit for food. There were four charges. Fines were inflicted on three and sentence was suspended on the fourth.

This is the first time the maximum fine has been inflicted on a dealer in meats. Justices Zeller, Salmon and Fleming were sitting when the Sulzberger case was called. Assistant Corporation Counsel Herman Stiefel prosecuted and Henry W. Unger of Levy & Unger appeared for the defense.

Health Department inspectors testified that they found tainted meat in the Sulzberger branch at One Hundred and Thirty-second street and Twelfth avenue on May 29 and May 31 and on June 14 of this year. They found forty pounds of tainted kidneys ready for sale in the Sulzberger branch at No. 408 Eleventh avenue on July 15.

SAYS THE TAIKED MEAT CAME FROM CHICAGO.

"Every possible precaution is taken by Sulzberger & Son to comply with the law regarding fresh meat," said Mr. Unger for the defense, after the charges had been established. "The meats complained of were sent here from Chicago. They had been inspected there by the men placed in the packing houses by the National Government to inspect all meats. They arrived here bearing the Government stamp required by the Pure Food Law. The men who accepted and stored the meats have been discharged."

"If my client is compelled to live up to the strict letter of the law, the business will be driven out of the city. I do not think we should be punished for having meat in our possession that is stamped by the United States Government but may spoil overnight."

"You and your clients may as well understand," said Justice Salmon, "that this is a sanitary law for the benefit of the public, and it is going to be enforced to the letter. You say you are careful. You must be more careful."

The fines were inflicted for the offenses of May 29, June 14 and July 15.

Mr. Brachfield, a wholesale egg dealer at No. 107 Park avenue, was fined $500 by the same court for selling bad eggs.

PRESIDENT PREDICTS FAIR WEATHER FOR BIG GAME.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Fair weather for the opening game of the world's series to-morrow, was predicted by President Wilson's never-failing weather forecasting staff to-day. The President shaves himself. Unlike most razor strops, his tells what the weather will be a day ahead.

The President was so busy that he didn't have time to think about the world's series until some one mentioned it. Then he recalled how his razor strop felt this morning.

significance the flower had can only be surmised.

Strangely enough none of the members of the family nor their guest, Mrs. Eaton, heard the shot that ended the unhappy girl's life. The revolver was one owned by the girl's brother and was kept in a drawer of a bureau in his room.

The police investigation, conducted to-day under the direction of Chief Flynn of Belleville, failed to develop any information concerning Edwards. So far as can be learned he was known to no one in Belleville, save the Courters, and they learned little of him from their daughter. It is believed that he was a Pennsylvania station in Newark said they had never heard of the man.

KILLED 20 PERSONS, MURDERER TELLS CHICAGO POLICE

Amazing Confession of Prisoner, Who Says Ten of His Victims Were Women.

ROBBERY HIS MOTIVE.

States He Beat to Death Maid of Helen Gould, but There's No Record of Such a Crime.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—While the police are satisfied that Harry Spencer is guilty of many murders besides that of Mrs. Mildred Allison Hexroat, they were forced to conclude to-day that his statement of murdering twenty persons, ten of them women, including a former maid of Helen Gould at Goshen, N. Y., is an exaggeration.

Spencer is addicted to the opium habit, a symptom of which is grotesque imagination. Some years ago the police learned that while he was in prison at Joliet on charge of larceny the prison authorities had regarded him as mentally defective and from time to time had confined him in the infirmary. He told fellow prisoners of having committed several murders.

Associated Press despatches from Detroit, Delavan Lake, Wis., and Goshen, N. Y., further shook official faith in the confessions. Investigations at these points, while not absolutely disproving Spencer's statements, indicated there was little likelihood that they were true.

An investigation, which will require some time, will be necessary, it is said, before it can be determined just how much of the prisoner's story is true and how much fiction.

SOME OF HIS STORIES PROBABLY ARE FICTION.

"Some of his stories probably are fiction," said Capt. Halpin to-day, "but on the whole he is almost as great a criminal as he claims to be."

I KILLED WOMEN JUST LIKE I'D SWAT A FLY.

"Women—I hate them. They never did anything but try to play me for a fool. I killed them just like I'd swat a fly."

Shaking his finger in Police Capt. Halpin's face, Spencer, who is a paroled convict with a string of aliases, today shrieked his accusation at the long list of women he claims as victims of his murderous hammer or pistol. He declares he killed ten women.

Spencer, who made his remarkable confession to a series of twenty murders after his capture last night, was routed out of his cell bunk before

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—None of Harry K. Thaw's treaty rights as an American citizen were violated when the Canadian immigration authorities forcibly deported him a few weeks ago. That was the ruling to-day of Solicitor Joseph W. Folk of the State Department.

HOLDS UP FRIEND IN JOKE AND IS STABBED TO DEATH

Young People at Party Arranged Plan to Frighten Timid Youth.

Four young men of East Orange "held up" one of their chums last night, and as a result one of the practical jokers died this morning in the Orange Memorial Hospital from a knife wound in the abdomen. The dead youth is Walter Winteroll, nineteen years old, whose parents live at No. 1707 Telford street, East Orange. Adolph Freytag, seventeen, living at No. 1404 Sanford street, East Orange, died the stabbing.

The practical joke was arranged at a girl's party, at which the young men were guests. Freytag was known to be timid and sensitive. The girls, as well as the boys, were in the joke, and the girls' part of the joke was to talk to him of holdups and to mention to him the possibility of his being attacked after seeing his "girl" home.

After seeing the girl home, young Freytag took the middle of the street returning to his own home. He was frightened. In his hand he carried a pocket knife, with the large blade open. He imagined that he saw shadows behind every tree. His knees shook as he walked. The slightest sound terrified him.

Then from behind a clump of trees young Winteroll emerged and, creeping softly up behind him, grasped him by the arms. With a yell of terror Freytag plunged his knife backward, and Winteroll, with a groan, fell into the road, stabbed in the abdomen. In a frenzy Freytag jumped on the amateur "hold-up" man and tore away the handkerchief which covered his face.

Winteroll smiled a ghastly smile up at him, and Freytag, recognizing him, uttered a piercing shriek. He threw away the bloody knife and covered his face with his hands as the rest of the boys in the "joke" came up to the pair. The three companions of Winteroll, themselves badly frightened, hurried their friend to the Memorial Hospital, where it was found that the blade had penetrated the abdomen two inches. Winteroll died at 3 o'clock this morning.

Freytag ran to his home and told his parents of the tragedy. This morning, when he found that Winteroll was dead, he gave himself up. He waited three times in the police station. Later he was taken to Newark and charged technically with manslaughter. County Prosecutor Hood set his bail, and he will be arraigned on Thursday before Police Recorder Nott in Orange and probably will be acquitted.

Son and Secretary of Thomas F. Ryan Tell of $10,000 Cash Payment; Bell Telephone Counsel of Another $10,000.

HE PHONED YOUNG RYAN "I'M THE SAME OLD BILL."

Testimony of Young Ryan Shows Sulzer Tried to Have Barnes Call Off Republicans.

By Samuel M. Williams.
(Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Oct. 6.—Two contributions of $10,000 each, both paid in cash, were traced into the hands of William Sulzer this afternoon at the impeachment trial.

One was paid directly to Sulzer by Ignatius V. McGlone, private secretary to Thomas F. Ryan, after Sulzer had phoned to Allan Ryan, son of the financier, to tell his father "I'm the same old Bill."

The other was in the shape of a "loan" from Edward P. Meany of Orange, N. J., a New York lawyer, who is counsel for the Bell Telephone Company. The "loan" was made at the request of Sulzer, but no note or security was taken.

Allan Ryan declared that Sulzer had asked him to go to Washington and ask Senator Root to intercede with William Barnes. The purpose was to have Barnes call off the Republican Senators in connection with impeachment proceedings. That part of young Ryan's testimony was stricken out by Judge Cullen, who was sustained by a vote of the court, 32 to 18. Some of the Republican Senators, notably Senator Brown, are said to be greatly enraged at information that Sulzer had sought to have Barnes influence them.

The testimony was the sensation of the afternoon. It overshadowed the opening statement of the defense, made by ex-Senator Hinman. It was introduced over strenuous objections by the defense to the reopening of the testimony after the prosecution had closed its case.

Hinman said the Sulzer defense would produce no evidence on any of the articles of impeachment excepting on those charging larceny of campaign funds and perjury in making a false affidavit of expenses. He attacked the State's case and insisted that nothing criminal had been proved against Gov. Sulzer since he assumed office. Because of this, he said, the Executive should not be removed.

When Allan A. Ryan was called to the stand he said he was the son of Thomas F. Ryan and gave his home as Suffern, N. Y. When asked what his occupation he hesitated and finally replied that he followed a great many lines. He said he was a member of the New York Stock Exchange, but was not a banker or broker, though he had offices at No. 66 Liberty street. He was questioned by Mr. Stanchfield.

CALLED TO PHONE TO TALK WITH SULZER.

Q. Did you have any communication with Gov. Sulzer before election? A. By telephone about the middle of October.

What was said? asked Mr. Stanchfield.

"We object," said Mr. Herrick. "The purpose of this is to show some additional contributions."

He proceeded with legal argument against reopening the case, but Judge Cullen overruled the objection and the examination of Mr. Ryan continued.

Q. What was the conversation? A. I can't recollect exactly. Mr. Sulzer endeavored several times to get in communication.

"Wait, hold on," cried the lawyers.

Mr. Herrick attempted to block the testimony by questioning the identity of the voice over the telephone.

"How did you know it was his voice?" asked Herrick.

"He said it was William Sulzer," was Ryan's reply.

"How do you know?" thundered Mr. Herrick. "That you were not talking to David Lagan?"

Mr. Ryan admitted he did know William Sulzer's voice, and there was a clash of lawyers over the point. Mr. Herrick was successful in heading off the testimony.

"Was there anything by which you could identify the party at the end of the wire?" asked Mr. Stanchfield.

WANTED TO SEND MESSAGE TO T. F. RYAN.

"He asked me to deliver a message
